 - 4) with a person under the age of fourteen years, with the exception of the cases envisaged by subclause 3), clause 2, article 30 of this Code;
 - 5) with a person under the age of sixteen years without the written consent of a parent, guardian or adoptive parent.
2. Recognition of the employment contract as invalid at the fault of the employer shall not entail loss by the former employee of his rights to payment for his labour, compensation for unused annual paid leave, other payments and benefits.
3. Recognition of the employment contract as invalid at the fault of the employer or of the employee shall entail their liability in accordance with the laws of the Republic of Kazakhstan.
4. Recognition of individual terms and conditions of an employment contract as null and void shall not entail invalidity of the employment contract as a whole.

Article 40. Prohibition on performance of work, not stipulated in the employment contract

The employer shall not have the right to demand that the employee perform work not stipulated by the employment contract, with the exception of cases envisaged by this Code and the laws of the Republic of Kazakhstan.

Article 41. Transfer of the employee at another job

1. The following shall constitute transfer of the employee to another job:

1) change of the work (labour function) of the employee, that is, performance of work in another position, speciality, profession or qualifications;

2) assignment of work during performance of which the working conditions (size of the wage, working time and rest time regime, benefits and other conditions) determined by the employment contract are changed;

3) transfer to a separate structural subdivision of the employer;

4) transfer to another location together with the employer.

2. Transfer of the employee to another job shall be permitted with the consent of the employee, shall be formalised by introduction of relevant amendments into the employment contract and issue of an act of the employer, with the exception of cases envisaged by this Code.

3. Movement of the employee, within the same organisation, to another work place, another structural subdivision of this organisation at the same location or assignment of work at another mechanism or piece of equipment shall not constitute transfer to another job and shall not require the employee's consent, provided it does not entail the amendments envisaged in clause 1 of this article.

Article 42. Transfer of the employee to another location together with the employer

1. The employer shall give the employee at least one month's written notice of the impending movement of the employer to another location, unless the employment contract or collective bargaining agreement envisages a longer notice period.

2. The employer shall make compensation payments connected with the employee's relocation in the event of his transfer to work at another location together with the employer, as envisaged by article 153 of this Code.

3. In the event of a written refusal by the employee to transfer to another location together with the employer, the employment contract with the employee shall be terminated on the grounds envisaged by subclause 1), clause 1, article 59 of this Code.

Article 43. Temporary transfer to another job for production purposes

If necessary for production purposes, including temporary replacement of an absent employee, the employer shall have the right to transfer an employee without his consent for a period of up to one month in the course of the calendar year to another job not encompassed by the employment contract and not contraindicated for him in terms of his state of health, within the same organisation, at the same location, with payment for the work performed being no less than the average wage for the work previously carried out.

Article 44. Temporary transfer to another job in the event of idle time

1. In the event of idle time, the employer shall have the right to transfer the employee without his consent and in consideration of his speciality and qualifications, to another job not contraindicated for him in terms of his state of health for a period of no more than one month in the course of the calendar year.

2. For transfer in the event of idle time, the labour compensation to the employee shall be made for the work performed, but shall be at least two-thirds of the average wage for the work previously carried out.

In the event of a written refusal by the employee to continue working in connection with the change in the working conditions, the employment contract with the employee shall be terminated on the grounds envisaged by subclause 2), clause 1, article 59 of this Code.

Article 45. Temporary transfer to another job for health reasons

1. The employee shall be temporarily transferred to easier work for health reasons for the period indicated in the medical opinion. On agreement between the parties, the employee may retain his salary from the work previously performed.

2. In connection with injury, occupational disease or other damage to health resulting from fulfilment of job duties, the employer shall, until working capacity is restored or disability established, transfer the employee to easier work or release him from work with payment of damages in accordance with the civil legislation of the Republic of Kazakhstan, as well as the terms and conditions of the employment contract and the collective bargaining agreement.

3. In the case of written refusal by the employee to transfer to other work in the event of industrial injury or occupational disease resulting from fulfilment of job duties or other damage to the health not connected with production, the employment contract with the employee shall be terminated on the grounds envisaged by subclause 4), clause 1, article 59 of this Code.

Article 46. Restriction on transfer of the employee to another job

Article 47. Movement of the employee at another work place. Change of position (job) title

1. The consent of the employee shall not be required for his movement to another work place or another structural subdivision at the same location or assignment of work at another mechanism or piece of equipment within the scope of his position, speciality, profession and qualifications, as determined by the employment contract, with the exception of cases when work in the structural subdivision, at the specific work place, mechanism or piece of equipment involves other working conditions.

2. A change in the position (job) title of the employee, of the structural subdivision, or a change in the management structure not entailing for the employee a change of working conditions and (or) the terms and conditions of the employment contract may be implemented by the employer without the employee's consent.

Article 48. Change of working conditions

1. In connection with changes in the organisation of production, including in the event of reorganisation, and (or) a reduction in the volume of work, it shall be permitted for the employer to change the working conditions of the employee given that he continues working in a position, speciality or profession corresponding to his qualifications, as determined by the employment contract.

In the event of a change of working conditions, relevant supplements and amendments shall be introduced into the employment contract and (or) the collective bargaining agreement.

2. The employer shall give at least one month's written notice to the employee and (or) his representatives of the change of working conditions, unless a longer notice period is envisaged by the employment contract or collective bargaining agreement.

If the employee does not agree to continue working under the new conditions, the employer shall offer him, in writing, any other available job corresponding to his qualifications and state of health and, in the absence of such a job, a vacant lower position or lower-paid job that the employee might perform in consideration of his qualifications and state of health.

3. In the event of written refusal by the employee to continue working in connection with the change of working conditions, the employment contract with the employee shall be terminated on the grounds envisaged by subclause 2), clause 1, article 59 of this Code.

4. In the event that the circumstances indicated in clause 1 of this article might entail a reduction in staff numbers or positions, the employer shall have the right, for the purpose of retaining work places and in consideration of the opinion of the employees' representatives, to introduce a part-time work regime.

Abolition of a part-time work regime that might entail a reduction in staff numbers or positions shall be carried out in consideration of the opinion of the employees' representatives.

Article 49. Labour relations in the event of a change of name, departmental affiliation, owner of the property or of reorganisation of the employer

In the event of a change in the name, departmental affiliation, or owner of the property or of reorganisation of the employer, labour relations with the employees shall continue without change.

Article 50. Suspension from work

1. In cases envisaged by the laws of the Republic of Kazakhstan, the employer shall suspend the employee from his job on the basis of acts issued by competent state authorities.

1. An employment contract with an employee shall be subject to termination in the event of withdrawal by the employee from labour relations in cases:

1) refusal by the employee to transfer to another location together with the employer;

2) refusal by the employee to continue work in connection with a change in the working conditions;

3) refusal by the employee to continue work in the event of reorganisation of a legal entity employer;

4) refusal by the employee to transfer to another job in the event of receiving an industrial injury or occupational disease in connection with fulfilment of his job duties or other damage to his health not connected with production.

2. Termination of the employment contract shall be permitted only given written withdrawal by the employee from the labour relations.

3. Termination of the employment contract shall not be permitted during a period of temporary disability of the employee (including maternity leave) and of leave.

Article 60. Cancellation of the employment contract in connection with transfer by the employee to an elected job(position) or appointment to the position

An employment contract with an employee shall be cancelled in connection with his transfer to an elected job (position) or appointment to the position, if the laws of the Republic of Kazakhstan prohibit people holding such positions from engaging in other paid work.

The grounds for this shall consist in notification of the employer by the employee and a certificate of election or appointment of the employee to the job (position).

Article 61. Termination of the employment contract as a consequence of violation of the terms and conditions for conclusion of an employment contract

1. An employment contract shall be subject to termination as a consequence of violation of the terms and conditions for conclusion of an employment contract, if said violation excludes the possibility of continued labour relations in cases of:

1) conclusion of an employment contract for performance of work contraindicated for the employee by reason of his state of health on the basis of a medical opinion;

2) conclusion of an employment contract for performance of work in violation of a sentence or court ruling that has come into legal effect and deprives the person of the right to hold certain positions or engage in certain activities;

3) conclusion of an employment contract with foreigners or stateless persons without obtaining, in the established manner, a resolution on engagement of foreign manpower or without observing the restrictions or exemptions established by the laws of the Republic of Kazakhstan;

4) in other cases envisaged by the laws of the Republic of Kazakhstan.

2. Termination of an employment contract on the grounds envisaged by subclauses 1) – 2), clause 1 of this article, shall be permitted if it is impossible to transfer the employee, with his consent, to another job with the employer that the employee can perform without restrictions. Given the consent of the employee to transfer to another job, an employment contract shall be concluded with him.

3. In the event of termination of the employment contract in the cases envisaged by subclauses 1) and 3), clause 1 of this article, the employer shall pay the employee compensation in the amount of his average wage for three months.

Article 62. Documentation of employment contract termination

1. Termination of an employment contract shall be documented by an act of the employer, with the exception of termination of an employment contract in the event of death of an individual employer (the employer is declared deceased or missing by a court of law) and termination of an employment contract with domestic employees.
2. The act of the employer shall indicate the grounds for termination of the employment contract in accordance with this Code.
3. The date of termination of the employment contract shall be the final day of work, with the exception of cases envisaged in this Code.
4. A copy of the act of the employer on termination of the employment contract shall be handed to the employee or sent to him by registered post within a period of three days.

Article 63. Issue of work books and documents associated with labour activities

1. On the day of termination of the employment contract, the employer shall issue the work book or other document confirming the labour activities performed by the employee.
2. At the request of the employee (including a former employee), the employer shall, within a period of five working days from the time of the application, issue a statement indicating the speciality (qualifications, position), time worked and wage, a reference containing information about the employees' qualifications and his attitude to his job, as well as other documents envisaged by this Code.
3. In the event of liquidation of bankruptcy of a legal entity employer or termination of the activities of an individual employer, the employer shall, given a debt towards the employee, issue a duly executed statement on the amount of the debt on wages and other payments.

Chapter 5. PROTECTION OF THE WORKER'S PERSONAL DATA

Article 64. Personal data of the employee and its processing

Personal data of the employee consists of information about the employee required on the initiation, continuation and termination of labour relations.

Processing of personal data of the employee shall mean receipt, storage and transmission of the personal data of the employee.

Article 65. Requirements on processing of personal data of the employee

During processing of personal data of the employee, the employer shall observe the following requirements:

- 1) processing of personal data of the employee shall be carried out for the purpose of ensuring observance of the laws and other regulatory and legal acts, assisting employees in job placement, training and career advancement, and ensuring personal protection of employees;

- 2) the volume and the content of the employee's personal data processed shall be determined in accordance with the Constitution of the Republic of Kazakhstan, this Code and other laws of the Republic of Kazakhstan;

Article 124. Wage indexation

A wage rise shall include wage indexation carried out by the employer in the manner established by agreements, the collective bargaining agreement or act of the employer, proceeding from the level of inflation determined for the corresponding period by regulatory and legal acts of the Republic of Kazakhstan.

Article 125. Organisation of labour compensation

1. The qualification requirements on employees and the complexity of certain types of work shall be determined on the basis of the Unified Tariff and Qualification Manual of work and professions of employees, rate and qualification characteristics of employee professions, the Qualifications Manual of jobs of managers, specialists and other officials, as well as model qualification characteristics of jobs of managers, specialists and other officials of organisations.
2. Inclusion of work performed in work of a specific complexity and awarding of qualification ranks and categories to employees shall be performed in accordance with the Unified Tariff and Qualification Manual of work and professions of employees, rate and qualification characteristics of employee professions, the Qualifications Manual of jobs of managers, specialists and other officials, as well as model qualification characteristics of jobs of managers, specialists and other officials of organisations.
3. Elaboration, review, appraisal, and approval of and the procedure for applying the manuals and rate and qualification characteristics of employee professions indicated in clause 1 of this article shall be determined by the state labour authority. Model qualification characteristics of jobs of managers, specialists and other officials of organisations engaging in various types of economic activity shall be elaborated and approved by competent state authorities in corresponding spheres of activity on agreement with the state labour authority.

Article 126. Systems of labour compensation

1. Payment for the labour of employees shall be made according to a time, piece-rate or other system of labour compensation. Payment may be made on the basis of individual and (or) collective labour results.

The system of labour compensation may be formed on the basis of a rate, non-rate or mixed system.

A rate system of labour compensation includes: a base rate (set wage), wage scale, rate coefficients.

A non-rate system of labour compensation is based on proportional distribution of the funds intended for payment of labour, depending on criteria and principles for assessing the professional qualities of employees and their contribution to the final result.

A mixed system of labour compensation may contain elements of both a rate and a non-rate system of labour compensation.

2. To raise the employees' interest in greater production efficiency and better quality of the work performed, the employer may introduce bonus systems and other forms of labour incentive.

3. The system of labour compensation and incentives for employees shall be determined by the terms and conditions of the collective bargaining agreement, the employment contract and (or) acts of the employer.
4. The system of labour compensation shall provide for the basic wage (relatively constant part of the wage) to constitute at least 75 per cent of the average monthly wage of employees, excluding one-time incentive payments.
5. The system of labour compensation of employees of organisations maintained out of the state budget and the budget of the National Bank of the Republic of Kazakhstan shall be established by regulatory and legal acts of the Republic of Kazakhstan.
6. The conditions of labour compensation and bonus payments of management personnel of national companies and joint-stock companies in which the controlling blocks of shares belong to the state shall be determined on the basis of the Model Regulations approved by the Government of the Republic of Kazakhstan.
7. The procedure for consideration and agreement of the parameters of the system of labour compensation of employees in organisations whose services (goods, work) are encompassed by state regulation of tariffs (prices, charges) shall be determined by the state labour authority.
8. The terms for labour compensation set in the employment contract, the collective bargaining agreement, other agreements and acts of the employer shall not be worse than those established by this Code and other regulatory and legal acts of the Republic of Kazakhstan.

Article 127. Overtime payment

In the event of time-based labour compensation, the payment for overtime work shall be at a rate of at least 150 per cent. In the event of piece-rate labour compensation, the mark-up for overtime shall be at least fifty per cent of the wage rate established for the employee.

Article 128. Payment for work on public holidays and days off

Payment for work on public holidays and days off shall be at a rate of at least 200 per cent proceeding from the daily (hourly) rate of the employee.

Article 129. Payment for night work

Each hour of work during the night shall be paid at a rate of at least 150 per cent proceeding from the daily (hourly) rate of the employee.

Article 130. Labour compensation for performance of work of different qualifications

Labour compensation for performance by the employee of work of different qualification shall be made as for the higher qualified work.

In cases when, in consideration of the nature of production, a more highly qualified employee is entrusted with performing work paid at a rate lower than his rank, the labour compensation shall be made according to his qualifications (rank).

Article 131. Labour compensation for job combining (expansion of the service zone) and performance of the duties of a temporarily absent employee

1. Employees fulfilling, within one and the same organisation, alongside their main job as per the employment contract, additional work in another position or the duties of a temporarily absent employee without being released from their main jobs, shall receive additional payment.
2. The amount of the mark-up from job combining (expansion of the service zone) or performance of the duties of a temporarily absent employee shall be set by the employer on agreement with the employee.

Article 132. Labour compensation for mastering new spheres of production(products)

Collective bargaining agreements and (or) employment contracts may envisage an employee retaining his previous wage during the period required for mastering new spheres of production (products).

Article 133. Idle time payment

1. The procedure and conditions for payment for idle time caused by the employer shall be determined by employment contracts and collective bargaining agreements and shall be established in an amount equal to at least fifty per cent of the employee's average wage.
2. Idle time at the fault of the employee shall not be subject to payment.

Article 134. Procedure and schedule for wage payment

1. Wages shall be paid in monetary form in the national currency of the Republic of Kazakhstan at least once a month, no later than the 10th day of the following month. The date for payment of wages shall be envisaged by employment contracts and collective bargaining agreements.
2. On payment of wages, the employer shall notify each employee, every month, in writing of the component parts of the wage due him for the corresponding period, the amount of and grounds for withholdings made, including information about mandatory pension contributions withheld and remitted, as well as about the aggregate monetary sum due for payment.
3. If the day for payment of wages falls on a day off or public holiday, payment shall be made on the day before.
4. In the event of delayed payment, at the fault of the employer, of wages and other payments connected with termination of the employment contract with the employee, the employer shall pay to the employee the debt and default interest. The amount of the default interest shall be calculated proceeding from the refinancing rate of the National Bank of the Republic of Kazakhstan on the day on which the obligations to pay the wage are fulfilled and shall accrue for each calendar day of delay, beginning from the day following that on which the payments are due and ending on the day of payment.
5. On termination of an employment contract, payment of the sums due to the employee by the employer shall be made within three working days of its termination.

Article 135. Place of wage payment

Wage payments to employees shall be made at the place where they work, unless the terms and conditions of the employment contract or the collective bargaining agreement envisage otherwise.

Article 136. Calculation of the average wage of the employee

1. Calculation of the average wage for both a five-day and a six-day working week shall be made on the basis of time actually worked, proceeding from the average daily (hourly) wage for the corresponding period and in consideration of established additional payment, mark-ups, bonuses and other incentive payments that are regular in nature and envisaged by the labour compensation system.
2. The calculation period for calculating the average wage shall be the twelve calendar months preceding the event with which the corresponding payment is connected in agreement with this Code. For employees that have been working for fewer than twelve calendar months, the average wage shall be determined for the time actually worked.
3. For all cases of determination of the average wage envisaged by this Code, the Government of the Republic of Kazakhstan establishes a unified calculation procedure.
4. The collective bargaining agreement may envisage other periods for calculation of the average wage, provided they are not to the detriment of the employees' position.

Article 137. Withholdings from wages

1. Withholdings from the wages of an employee shall be made by court ruling, as well as in cases envisaged by the laws of the Republic of Kazakhstan.
2. Withholdings from the wages of an employee for the purpose of redeeming his debt towards the organisations for which he works may also be made on the basis of an act of the employer, given the written consent of the employee.
3. The total amount of monthly withholdings shall not exceed fifty per cent of the wage due the employee.

Article 138. Payment of a wage not received owing to death of the employee

A wage not received owing to death of an employee shall be paid out in the manner established by the civil legislation of the Republic of Kazakhstan.

with use by the employee of his personal property in the interests of the employer

When an employee uses his personal property in the interests of the employer and with its consent, the employer shall make compensation payments for use, wear and tear (depreciation) of tools, personal transport, other technical means and their operating costs by agreement between the parties.

Article 156. Compensation payments to employees in cases when their work is performed en route or is a travelling job or involves official trips within the bounds of sectors serviced

1. When the work of employees is performed en route or is a travelling job or involves official trips within the bounds of sectors serviced, compensation payments shall be made for every day spent away from the permanent place of residence in the manner established by agreements, collective bargaining agreements, employment contracts and (or) acts of the employer.
2. In the event that employees are not travelling every day of the month, the payment shall be made in proportion to the actual number of days spent travelling to and from the place of work (performance of the work).
3. Compensation payments shall be made irrespective of the work and rest regime.
4. Compensation payments shall not be taken into consideration in calculating the average wages of employees of organisations.

Article 157. Compensation payments in connection with loss of work

1. The employer shall make compensation payments in connection with loss of work in the amount of the average monthly wage in the following cases:
 - 1) on cancellation of the employment contract on the initiative of the employer in the event of liquidation of a legal entity employer or termination of the activities of an individual employer;
 - 2) on cancellation of the employment contract on the initiative of the employer in the event of reduction of staff numbers or positions.
2. The employer shall make the compensation payment to the employee in connection with loss of work in the amount of three times the average monthly wage in the event of cancellation of the employment contract on the initiative of the employee if the employer supplied incorrect information about the working conditions when the employment contract was concluded or the employer violates the labour legislation of the Republic of Kazakhstan, of the terms and conditions of the employment contract or the collective bargaining agreement.
3. Employment contracts and collective bargaining agreements might envisage higher compensation payments in connection with loss of work.

Article 158. Procedure and conditions for payments of field provisions

1. Field provisions shall be paid for employees of geological survey, topographical-geodesic, and survey organisations when working under field conditions:
 - 1) away from their permanent place of residence and not commuting on a daily basis to their permanent place of residence;
 - 2) away from their permanent place of residence but commuting on a daily basis to the field organisation base, which does not constitute a permanent place of residence either;

- 3) away from their permanent place of residence on a rotational work basis.
2. Payment of field provisions shall be made for all calendar days spent performing field work.
3. Field provisions shall not be paid to employees during annual paid leave.
4. When the employee leaves the field organisation on a business trip, payment for field provisions shall be halted, while business trip expenses will be reimbursed in accordance with this Code.
5. The amount of field provisions shall not be included in calculation of the average wages of employees of organisations.
6. The payment procedure and conditions and the amount of field provisions and recording of time worked under field conditions shall be established in agreements, collective bargaining agreements and employment contracts and shall be approved by acts of the employer.
7. During work under field conditions, payment of field provisions to the employee for days off shall be made depending on the place where said days are spent (at the facility, on the field work site, at the field organisation base, outside the work place). The given procedure may be applied irrespective of the applied forms of labour organisation and work and rest regime.

Article 159. Payment to employees of social allowances at the expense of the employer

1. The employer shall pay employees temporary disability allowances, maternity allowances and allowances for women (men) adopting newborns out of its won funds.
2. The grounds for payment of social allowances for temporary disability consist of disability certificates issued in the manner established by the legislation of the Republic of Kazakhstan.
3. Social allowances for temporary disability shall be paid to employees from the first day of disability until the day on which their working capacity is restored or until permanent disability is established on the basis of their average wage, calculated in accordance with the legislation of the Republic of Kazakhstan.
4. The amount of the social allowance, the procedure for granting and paying it shall be determined by the Government of the Republic of Kazakhstan. Employers shall have the right to establish supplementary payments to employees to the social allowances established by the legislation of the Republic of Kazakhstan.

Chapter 14. MATERIAL LIABILITY OF THE PARTIES TO THE EMPLOYMENT CONTRACT

Article 160. Obligation of a party to the employment contract to reimburse for damage (harm) caused

1. A party to an employment contract that inflicts damage (harm) on the other party shall recompense the latter in accordance with this Code and other laws of the Republic of Kazakhstan.
2. Employment contracts and collective bargaining agreements might specify the responsibilities of the employee and of the employer.

3. Termination of an employment contract after infliction of damage (harm) does not release a party to the employment contract from material liability for recompensing the other party for damage (harm) caused.

Article 161. Conditions for material liability of a party to an employment contract for inflicting damage (harm)

1. Material liability of a party to an employment contract for damage (harm) inflicted thereby on the other party to the employment contract shall be imposed for damage (harm) caused as a result of culpable, unlawful conduct (actions or inaction) and a cause and effect link between the culpable, unlawful conduct and the damage (harm) inflicted, unless this Code and other laws of the Republic of Kazakhstan envisage otherwise.

2. The employer shall bear material liability towards the employee:

- 1) for damage inflicted by unlawful deprivation of the employee of the possibility of working at his work place;
- 2) for damage inflicted on property of the employee;
- 3) for harm inflicted on the life and (or) health of the employee.

3. The employee shall bear material liability towards the employer:

- 1) for damage inflicted by loss of or damage to the property of the employer;
- 2) for damage arising as a result of actions (inaction) on the part of the employee.

4. The employer and the employee shall bear mutual material liability in other cases established by collective bargaining agreements and employment contracts.

Article 162. Material liability of the employer for damage inflicted on the employee by unlawful deprivation of his opportunity to work

1. The employer shall recompense the employee for wages and other payments due thereto and not received thereby in the event of unlawful transfer to another job, shut-out of the employee from the work place, unilateral amendment of the terms and conditions of the employment contract, suspension from work, or unjustified cancellation of the employment contract.

2. Employment contracts, collective bargaining agreements and acts of the employer agreed with employees' representatives may establish additional cases of reimbursement by the employer for damage caused by unlawful deprivation of the employee of the opportunity to work.

Article 163. Material liability of the employer for damage inflicted on the property of the employee

An employer causing damage to the property of an employee shall reimburse the latter in full in accordance with the terms and conditions of the employment contracts and the collective bargaining agreement.

Article 164. Material liability of the employer for harm inflicted on the life and (or) health of the employee

1. In the event of harm being inflicted on the life and (or) health of the employee in connection with fulfilment thereby of his job duties, the employer shall make recompense for the harm in the volume envisaged by the civil legislation of the Republic of Kazakhstan.
2. Harm envisaged by clause 1 of this article shall be reimbursed in full provided the employee receives no insurance indemnity. If insurance indemnity is paid out, the employer shall reimburse the employee the difference between the insurance sum and the actual scale of the harm caused.
3. The procedure for employers to make recompense for harm inflicted on the life and (or) health of employees is determined by the legislation of the Republic of Kazakhstan.

Article 165. Material liability of the employee for causing damage to the employer

1. Material liability of the employee for damage inflicted on the employer shall be imposed in cases and on the scale envisaged by this Code.
2. The employee shall make recompense for direct and real damage inflicted on the employer.
3. Liability of the employee for damage inflicted on the employer shall be excluded if the damage arises as a result of force majeure or extreme necessity, necessary defence or failure by the employer to fulfil its obligations to provide the proper conditions for safekeeping of the property transferred to the employee.
4. It shall not be permitted to impose liability on the employee for damage that might be classed as normal production and business risk.
5. The employer shall create for employees the conditions necessary for normal work and guarantees of full safekeeping of the property entrusted thereto.
6. Direct and real damage shall be understood as a real reduction in the property of the employer or deterioration in the conditions of the given property (including property of third parties kept by the employer, if the employer is liable for the safekeeping of this property), as well as the need for the employer to incur costs and excessive outlays on acquiring or restoring the property.

Article 166. Limits to the material liability of the employee

The employee shall bear material liability for damage inflicted within the limits of his average monthly wage, unless otherwise envisaged by this Code.

Article 167. Cases of full material liability of the employee for damage inflicted on the employer

Full material liability for damage inflicted on the employer shall be imposed on the employee in the following cases:

- 1) failure to ensure the safekeeping of property and other values transferred to the employee on the basis of a written agreement on acceptance of full material liability;
- 2) failure to ensure the safekeeping of property and other values received by the employee on account on the basis of a separate document;
- 3) infliction of damage under the influence of alcohol, narcotics or toxic substances (their analogues);
- 4) shortages, deliberate destruction or deliberate spoilage of materials, semi-finished goods, items (products), including during their manufacture, as well as tools, measuring instruments, special clothing and other items issued by the employer to the employee for the latter's use;
- 5) infliction of damage by means of unlawful actions on the part of the employee, as confirmed in the manner established by the legislation of the Republic of Kazakhstan.

Article 168. Agreements on full personal and collective (joint and several) material liability

1. An employee occupying a position or performing work connected with storage, processing, sale (release), carriage, application or other use in the production process of property and items handed thereto and the employer shall conclude a written agreement on full personal material liability of the employee for the safekeeping of the property and other items handed thereto.
2. Employees jointly performing work connected with storage, processing, sale (release), carriage, application or other use in the production process of property and items transferred thereto, when it is not possible to distinguish the material liability of each employee for causing damage, and the employer shall conclude a written agreement on full collective (joint and several) material liability of employees for safekeeping of the property and other items handed thereto.
3. Agreements on full personal or collective (joint and several) material liability may be concluded both on conclusion of the employment contract and as a supplement to an employment contract.
4. The list of jobs and work held or performed by employees, with whom agreements may be concluded on full personal and collective (joint and several) material liability for safekeeping of property and other items transferred, to employees, as well as a model agreement on full material liability, shall be approved by the collective bargaining agreement (if applicable) or acts of the employer.

Article 169. Procedure for reimbursement of the parties to an employment contract for damage (harm) inflicted

The party to the employment contract that causes damage (harm) to the other party shall make recompense for it in the amount established by this Code and the laws of the Republic of Kazakhstan, on the basis of a court ruling or voluntarily.

Chapter 15. CONSIDERATION OF INDIVIDUAL LABOUR DISPUTES

Article 170. Bodies for consideration of individual labour disputes

1. Individual labour disputes shall be considered by mediation commission and (or) courts.

2. Individual labour disputes shall be considered by a mediation commission by application from a party to the labour dispute.
3. The parties to the employment contract may, at their own choice, apply for resolution of the individual labour dispute directly by a court of law.

Article 171. Formation of the mediation commission and organisation of its work

1. The mediation commission shall be set up on parity principles, consisting of an equal number of representatives of the employer and of employees.
2. The numerical strength of the mediation commission, the procedure by which it works and the term of the powers of the mediation commission shall be established on agreement between the employer and employees at a general meeting (conference) of employees.
3. The members of the mediation commission on the part of the employees shall be elected by a general meeting (conference) of employees. The members of the mediation commission on the part of the employer shall be appointed by an act of the employer. Members of the mediation commission shall, at the first organisational meeting, elect a chairman and secretary from among them by a simple majority of votes.
4. The mediation commission shall consider the labour dispute with a period of seven days from the date on which the application is submitted.
5. On the basis of the results of the consideration, the mediation commission shall adopt a resolution, which shall be issued to the applicant within three days of its adoption.

Article 172. Time limits for applying to the bodies for consideration of individual labour disputes

The following time periods are established for applying to the bodies for consideration of individual labour disputes:

- 1) on disputes for reinstatement in a job – three months from the day on which the copy of the act of the employer on cancellation of the employment contract is served;
- 2) on other labour disputes – one year from the day when the employee or the employer became aware or should have become aware of the violation of their rights.

Article 173. Terms of reference of the mediation commission on labour disputes

The mediation commission is a body for considering labour disputes arising in organisations, with the exception of disputes with respect to which this Code and other laws of the Republic of Kazakhstan establish a different resolution procedure.

A labour dispute shall be considered by the mediation commission if the employee is independently or with the participation of his representative unable to resolve the dispute in direct negotiations with the employer.

Article 174. Procedure for consideration of a labour dispute by the mediation commission

An application received by the mediation commission shall be subject mandatory registration by the given commission.

The mediation commission shall consider the labour dispute within a period of seven calendar days from the day on which the application is submitted.

The dispute shall be considered in the presence of the applicant or his authorised representative. Consideration of the dispute in the absence of the employee or his representative shall be permitted only on the basis of his written application. In the event that the employee or his representative fails to attend the meeting of the given commission, consideration of the labour dispute shall be deferred. In the event of repeat failure by the employee or his representative to attend without good reason, the mediation commission may issue a resolution on withdrawal of the issue from consideration, which does not deprive the employee of the right to submit a second application for consideration of the labour dispute within the time limit established by this Code.

The mediation commission shall have the right to summon witnesses and invite experts to take part in its meeting. At the demand of the commission, the head of the organisation shall submit the requisite document thereto by the set deadline.

A meeting of the mediation commission shall be deemed legally competent provided it is attended by at least half the members representing the employees and at least half the members representing the employer.

At a meeting of the mediation commission, minutes shall be kept and said minutes shall be signed by the chairman or deputy chairman of the commission.

Article 175. Procedure by which the mediation commission adopts a resolution and its content

The mediation commission shall adopt a resolution by a simple majority of the votes of the commission members present at the meeting. At the demand of the applicant or one of the members of the commission, voting may be held in secret.

A resolution of the mediation commission shall indicate:

the name of the organisation (subdivision), full name, position, profession or specialisation of the employee appealing to the commission;

the date of the application to the commission and of consideration of the dispute; the essence of the dispute;

full names of the members of the commission and other persons present at the meeting;

the essence of the resolutions and the grounds for it (with reference to a law or other regulatory and legal act);

results of the voting.

Duly certified copies of the resolution of the mediation commission shall be provided to the employee and to the head of the organisation within a period of three days of the resolution being adopted.

Article 176. Fulfilment of resolutions of the mediation commission

A resolution of the mediation commission shall be subject to fulfilment by the deadline set thereby.

In the event of non-fulfilment of a resolution of the commission by the set deadline, the employee or the employer shall have the right to have the labour dispute resolution enforced through a court of law.

Article 177. Reinstatement of an employee in his job by the authority for consideration of an individual labour dispute

1. In the event of termination of the employment contract without lawful grounds or unlawful transfer to other work, transfer to another work place, change of working conditions, or suspension from work, the body considering the individual labour dispute shall issue a resolution to reinstate the employee in his previous job, with the exception of the cases indicated in clause 3 of this article.
2. An employee reinstated in his previous job shall be paid his average wage for the entire period of enforced absence (suspension from work) or the wage difference for time spent performing lower-paid work, but for a maximum of six months.
3. At the request of the employee, the body considering the individual labour dispute may confine itself to adopting a resolution on payment to the employee of wages in the amount indicated in clause 2 of this article.
4. A resolution of the body for considering an individual labour dispute on reinstatement of the employee in his previous job shall be subject immediate execution. In the event of a delay by the employer in fulfilling the resolution on job reinstatement, the body for consideration of an individual labour dispute shall adopt a resolution on payment to the employee of his average wage or the difference in wages for the period of delay in execution of the resolution.

SECTION 3. SPECIFICS OF REGULATION OF THE LABOUR OF CERTAIN CATEGORIES OF WORKERS

Chapter 16. SPECIFICS OF REGULATION OF THE LABOUR OF EMPLOYEES UNDER THE AGE OF EIGHTEEN YEARS

2) on the mechanism for regulating labour compensation proceeding from the price and inflation levels, the subsistence level and fulfilment of the parameters determined by the agreement;

3) on compensation payments;

4) on promotion of employment, occupational training and further training of employees;

5) on organisation of protection of the health of employees at work by creating favourable conditions for work and rest and providing a suitable environment;

6) on measures to foster a healthy lifestyle;

7) on special measures for social security of employees and members of their families;

8) on measures to protect employees in the event of a temporary suspension of production;

9) on prevention of conflicts and strikes and on strengthening of labour discipline;

10) on the conditions for employees' representatives to carry out their activities;

11) other provisions relating to socio-labour matters and not running counter to the legislation;

12) on promotion of development of the social infrastructure.

5. Branch agreements shall envisage provisions:

1) on payment, working conditions and labour safety, the working time and rest time regime;

2) on compensation payments;

3) on special measures for social security of employees;

4) on the mechanism for regulating labour compensation proceeding from the price and inflation levels, the subsistence level and fulfilment of the parameters determined by the agreement;

5) on establishment of branch multiplying factors.

6. Agreement provisions creating a worse position for employees compared to the labour legislation of the Republic of Kazakhstan shall be deemed null and void.

Article 277. Registration of agreements

1. Branch and regional agreements concluded at the region level shall be registered by the state labour authority.

2. Branch and regional agreements concluded at the city and district level shall be registered by local executive authorities.

Article 278. Agreement operation

1. Agreements shall apply to the relevant executive authorities, employees and employers who empowered the corresponding representatives of the parties to the negotiations to elaborate and conclude the given agreements on their behalf.

2. An agreement shall apply to:

all employers that are members of the associations of employers that concluded the agreement. Termination of membership of an association of employers shall not release the employer from the obligation to fulfil an agreement concluded during the period of its membership. An employer that joins an association of employers during the term of validity of an agreement shall fulfil the obligations envisaged by this agreement; employers that accede to the agreement after its signing.

3. Agreements shall also apply to organisations located on the territory of the Republic of Kazakhstan, owners of the assets, founders of (participants in) or shareholders in which are foreign individuals or legal entities or organisations with foreign participation.

4. The state labour authority at the republican level, empowered state authorities in the given sphere of activity at the branch level and local executive bodies at the regional level shall have the right, after publication of the agreement, to propose to associations of employers, employers and associations of employees that did not participate in conclusion of the agreement that they accede to the agreement at the corresponding level. The given proposals shall be subject to official publication.

If associations of employers, employers and associations of employees do not, within a period of 30 calendar days of the date of official publication of the proposal to accede to the agreement, submit a written, reasoned refusal to accede thereto to the relevant executive authorities, the agreement shall be recognised as being applicable to them from the day of the official publication of this proposal.

Article 279. Control over fulfilment of agreements

Control shall be exercised of fulfilment of agreements by the parties to the social partnership.

Article 280. Liability for refusal to participate in negotiations

Refusal by representatives of the parties to participate in negotiations on conclusion or amendment of an agreement on social partnership or unlawful refusal to sign an adopted agreement on social partnership or to provide the information necessary for holding negotiations and exercising control over observance of the rules of an agreement on social partnership, as well as violation of or failure to fulfil its terms and conditions shall entail the liability established by the laws of the Republic of Kazakhstan.

Chapter 31. THE COLLECTIVE BARGAINING AGREEMENT

Article 281. Principles for holding collective bargaining negotiations

The principles for holding collective bargaining negotiations are:

equality and respect for the interests of the parties;

freedom of choice in discussing the matters constituting the content of the collective agreement or other agreement;

voluntary assumption of obligations by the parties;

abidance by the labour legislation of the Republic of Kazakhstan.

Article 282. Procedure for holding collective bargaining negotiations, elaborating and concluding collective bargaining agreements

1. Any party may initiate the preparation of a draft collective bargaining agreement.

A party that receives a notification from the other party proposing starting negotiations on conclusion of a collective bargaining agreement shall, within a period of ten days, consider it and join the negotiations in the manner established by clause 2 of this article.

2. For holding of collective bargaining negotiations and preparing a draft collective bargaining agreement, the parties shall set up a commission on a parity basis. The numerical strength of the commission, its members and the deadlines for elaborating the draft and concluding the collective bargaining agreement shall be determined by agreement between the parties.

The employer shall, on agreement between the parties, provide the conditions necessary for elaborating and concluding the collective bargaining agreement.

Employees that are not members of the trades union shall have the right to authorise both the trades union body and other representatives to represent their interests in the interrelations with the employer.

Given the existence of several employees' representatives in the organisation, they may establish a unified representative body for participation in the commission and signing of collective bargaining agreement. At the same time, each of them shall be entitled to representation on the unified body for holding negotiations on the basis of the principle of proportional representation, depending on the number of employees they represent.

3. The draft collective bargaining agreement prepared by the commission shall be subject to mandatory discussion by the employees of the organisation. The draft discussion format shall be determined by the employees themselves. The draft shall be worked up by the commission in consideration of comments and proposals submitted.

4. On attainment of agreement between the parties, the collective bargaining agreement shall be drawn up in at least two originals and shall be signed by representatives of the parties.

5. In the event of disagreements between the parties over individual provisions of the collective bargaining agreement, within a period of one month from the launch of the collective bargaining negotiations the parties shall sign a collective bargaining agreement on the terms and conditions agreed and, at the same time, draw up a disagreement report.

6. Amendment and supplementation of the collective bargaining agreement shall be conducted only on mutual agreements between the parties in the manner established in this article for its conclusion.

7. The participants in collective bargaining negotiations shall not have the right to divulge information received if this information constitutes a state, official, commercial or other secret protected by law.

8. The participants in collective bargaining negotiations may be released from performance of their job duties during said negotiations and shall retain their average monthly wage. The given period shall be included in their work service record.

9. The representatives of the parties shall, within a period of one month, submit the collective bargaining agreement signed by the parties to the territorial subdivision of the state labour authority for monitoring purposes.

10. The representatives of the parties shall periodically inform the employees on the course of implementation of the collective bargaining agreement.

Article 283. Parties to a collective bargaining agreement

1. The parties to a collective bargaining agreement are employees and the employer.

2. A collective bargaining agreement may be concluded both within organisations and within branches and representative offices.

Article 284. Content and structure of the collective bargaining agreement

1. The content and structure of the collective bargaining agreement shall be determined by the parties. The collective bargaining agreement shall include the following provisions:

1) on work time standard setting, forms and systems of labour compensation, rates and wages, supplements and mark-ups to employees, including those engaged in heavy work and work under harmful (particularly harmful) and (or) hazardous working conditions;

2) on indexation of labour compensation, on payment of allowances and compensation, including additional compensation in the event of accidents;

3) on the permissible ratio of maximum and minimum wages in the corresponding profession or position within the organisation;

4) on establishment inter-rank coefficients;

5) on the duration of working time and rest time, and leave;

6) on creation of healthy and safe working and living conditions, on financing of labour protection and labour safety measures, on improving health protection, on guarantees of medical insurance of employees and their families and on environmental protection;

7) on establishment of inter-rank coefficients for the given branch.

2. The collective bargaining agreement may include mutual obligations of employees and of the employer on the following matters:

1) on improvement of labour organisation and raising production efficiency;

2) on labour regulations and labour discipline;

3) on provision of employment, training, further training, re-training and job placement of employees made redundant;

4) on guarantees and benefits to employees combining work and study;

- 5) on improving the housing and living conditions of employees;
 - 6) on health improvement, sanatorium and resort treatment and rest for employees;
 - 7) on the procedure for taking account of the reasoned opinion of the trades union organisation body when cancelling employment contracts with employee members of the trades union;
 - 8) on guarantees to employees elected to trades union bodies;
 - 9) on the conditions for employees' representatives to carry out their activities;
 - 10) on creation of the conditions for the activities of the trades union;
 - 11) on insurance of employees;
 - 12) on control over fulfilment of the collective bargaining agreement and the procedure for introducing amendments and supplements thereto;
 - 13) on prevention of employment contract termination on the initiative of the employer for strike reasons;
 - 14) on liability of employees and of the employer for damage inflicted thereby;
 - 15) on liability of the parties for fulfilment of the collective bargaining agreement;
 - 16) on voluntary occupational pension contributions;
 - 17) other issues determined by the parties.
3. The collective bargaining agreement shall not create a worse position for employees compared to the labour legislation, general, branch and regional agreements. Such provisions shall be deemed null and void.

Article 285. Terms and sphere of operation of the collective bargaining agreement

1. A collective bargaining agreement shall be concluded for the term decided by the parties.
- 2 A collective bargaining agreement shall come into effect from the time of its signing, unless its provisions envisage otherwise, and shall be binding on the parties.
3. The collective bargaining agreement shall apply to the employer and the employees of the organisation on whose behalf the collective bargaining agreement was concluded and to employees that accede thereto on the basis of a written application.
4. A collective bargaining agreement shall remain in force during a period of reorganisation (merger, absorption, split-up, spin-off and transformation) of an organisation.
5. In the event of change of owner of the assets of an organisation, the collective bargaining agreement shall remain in effect for a period of three months. During this period, the parties shall have the right to launch negotiations on conclusion of a new collective bargaining agreement or retention, amendment and supplementation of the existing one.

6. In the event of liquidation of the organisation or its being declared bankrupt, the collective bargaining agreement shall be vitiated from the time of termination of the employment contracts with all the employees.

Article 286. Liability of the parties for failure to fulfil the collective bargaining agreement

For failure to fulfil the obligations envisaged by the collective bargaining agreement, the parties shall be held liable in accordance with the collective bargaining agreement and the laws of the Republic of Kazakhstan.

Article 287. Guarantees and compensation for negotiation time

Invited experts and specialists shall be paid for their labour under an employment contract concluded with them by employers or employees' representative bodies.

The members of employees' representative bodies participating in the collective bargaining negotiations may not, during the period of said negotiations, be dismissed on the initiative of the employer without the consent of the relevant representative body (except for in the event of liquidation of the organisation).

Chapter 32. CONSIDERATION OF COLLECTIVE LABOUR DISPUTES

Article 288. Emergence of a collective labour dispute

1. A collective labour dispute shall be deemed to have arisen from the day of written notification of the employer of the employees' claims, approved by resolution of the general meeting (conference) or from the day on which the period indicated in article 290 of this Code expires, in the event that the employer or association of employers does not give notification of their resolutions.

2. Collective labour disputes shall be resolved by means of mediation procedures and (or) in a court of law.

Article 289. Procedure for drawing up and announcing the claims of the employees

1. Claims of employees for establishment and amendment of working conditions and labour compensation, conclusion, amendment and fulfilment of collective bargaining agreements and agreements between employees and the employer or association of employers shall be formulated and approved by a general meeting (conference) of employees attended by at least half the employees of the organisation by a simple majority of the votes of the participants in the meeting (conference).

2. The employees' claims shall be set out in writing and shall be sent to the employer or associations of employers within a period of three calendar days following the holding of the general meeting (conference) of employees.

3. In the event that the given claims are put forward by employees of different employers, these claims may be lodged by branch or regional associations of trades union or other individuals and (or) legal entities authorised by the employees.

4. The employer or association of employers shall refrain from any intervention capable of impeding the holding of the general meeting (conference) of employees on putting forward their claims.

Article 290. Consideration of employee claims

The employer or association of employers shall consider claims entered by employees within a maximum of seven calendar days from their receipt and shall take steps to settle them and, if it is not possible to settle them, inform the employees of their decisions and proposals in writing, indicating their representatives for subsequent consideration of arising disagreements.

Article 291. Mediation procedures

1. If employee claims cannot be settled in the manner envisaged in article 290 of this Code, they shall be considered by mediation procedures.

Claims rejected or only partially satisfied by the employer or association of employers (their representatives) shall initially be considered by a mediation commission, and if agreement cannot be reached by said commission, then by a labour tribunal.

2. At any stage in the consideration of a collective labour dispute, the parties may engage a conciliator. The conciliation procedure is independent of mediation procedures in a mediation commission or labour tribunal and may run in parallel thereto.

Article 292. The mediation commission

1. A mediation commission shall be set up by the parties within a period of three calendar days of the employer or association of employers (their representatives) informing or failing to inform the employees (their representatives) of their decision or of the report on disagreements being drawn up in the course of collective bargaining negotiations.

2. The mediation commission shall be formed of representatives of the parties to the collective labour dispute on a parity basis. The decision to set up a mediation commission shall be executed as an act of the employer and a resolution of the employees' representatives.

3. The mediation commission shall consider the claims entered by the employees (their representatives) within a maximum of seven calendar days of its establishment. The procedure for consideration of the claims by the mediation commission and prolongation of the given period shall be determined on agreement between the parties and drawn up in a report.

4. In the process of the mediation procedures, the mediation commission shall consult with the employees (their representatives), the employer, the association of employers (their representatives), state authorities and other interested parties.

5. The commission shall adopt its decision on the basis of agreement between the parties. Said decision shall be drawn up in a report, signed by the representatives of the parties, and shall be binding on the parties.

6. If the mediation commission is unable to reach a consensus, it shall cease its deliberations and resolution of the dispute shall be referred to a labour tribunal.

Article 293. The labour tribunal

1. A labour tribunal shall be set up by the parties to the collective labour dispute within a period of five calendar days of termination of the work of the mediation commission, with participation by members of the republican, branch or regional commission for regulating socio-labour relations.

2. The numerical strength of the labour tribunal, its members and the procedure for considering the labour dispute shall be determined by agreement between the parties. The labour tribunal shall consist of at least five members. The labour tribunal shall include representatives of public associations, the state labour inspector, specialists, experts and other persons.

3. The chairman of the labour tribunal shall be elected by the parties from among the members of the tribunal.

4. A collective labour dispute shall be considered by a labour tribunal with mandatory participation by representatives of the parties to the collective labour dispute and, if necessary, also with the participation of representatives of other interested parties.

5. The procedure for consideration of the dispute shall be determined by the labour tribunal and the parties to the collective labour dispute shall be informed thereof.

6. The labour tribunal shall adopt its decision within a maximum of seven calendar days from the day of its creation by a simple majority of the votes of the tribunal members. If the votes of the members of the labour tribunal are equally divided, the chairman shall have the deciding vote. The decision shall be reasoned, set out in writing and signed by all the members of the tribunal.

7. In the event that the parties to the collective labour dispute are unable to reach an agreement in the mediation commission in organisations in which strikes are prohibited or restricted by law, formation of a labour tribunal shall be mandatory.

8. The decision of the labour tribunal shall be binding on the parties to the collective labour dispute.

Article 294. Consideration of a collective labour dispute with the participation of a conciliator

1. The procedure for consideration of a collective labour dispute with the participation of a conciliator is determined by agreement between the parties to the collective labour dispute.

2. As conciliators, the parties shall appoint independent organisations and persons. A republican, branch or regional commission for regulation of socio-labour relations might, with the consent of the parties to the collective labour dispute, engage heads and employees of central and local executive authorities, associations and other public bodies, employers and independent experts in the work to resolve collective labour disputes.

In all cases of election of conciliators, written consent to the mediation must be received.

Article 295. Consequences of agreement being reached by the parties on the collective labour dispute

1. In all cases when agreement is reached between the parties to the collective labour dispute on its resolution with or without the participation of a conciliator, incomplete mediation procedures are halted and the conditions of the agreement between the parties are considered as the conditions of the resolution of the dispute.

Agreements achieved by the parties to the collective labour dispute shall be drawn up in writing.

2. Achievement of an agreement between the parties on resolution of the dispute shall entail an end to a strike, if declared.

Article 296. Guarantees in connection with settlement of a collective labour dispute

The members of the mediation commission during their participation in the negotiations to resolve a collective labour dispute shall be released from their main jobs and shall retain their average wage.

Employees' representatives and associations thereof participating in resolving a collective labour dispute may not, during the period of resolution of the collective labour dispute, be subjected to disciplinary sanctions or transferred to other work and the employment contracts with them may not be cancelled on the initiative of the employer without the prior consent of the body authorised to represent them.

Article 297. Obligations of the parties and mediation bodies in settling collective labour disputes

1. None of the parties shall have the right to refuse to participate in mediation procedures.

2. The parties shall be notified in writing of disagreements in a collective labour dispute not resolved by the mediation commission or labour tribunal.

3. If disagreements between the parties to the collective labour dispute cannot be resolved by reason of inadequate powers on the part of the employer's representative, the employees' claims shall be submitted to the owners of the assets, the founders of (participants in) or shareholders in organisations, including organisations located on the territory of the Republic of Kazakhstan, owners of property that are foreign physical or legal entities or organisations with foreign participation.

4. If the employees disagree with the results of the procedures indicated in clauses 2 and 3 of this article, they shall have the right to use all the other methods envisaged by law for protecting their interests, up to and including strikes.

Article 298. The right to strike

1. Employees may decide to call a strike if mediation procedures have failed to resolve the collective labour dispute, as well as in cases when the employer refuses to participate in the mediation procedures or does not fulfil the agreement achieved in the course of resolution of the collective labour dispute.

2. A decision to call a strike shall be taken at a meeting (conference) of employees (their representatives) attended by at least half the total number of employees of the organisation and shall be deemed to have been adopted if it is supported by at least two-thirds of the votes of the participants in the meeting (conference).

3. A strike shall be headed by a body authorised by the employees (their representatives) (strike committee). In the event of a strike being declared by the employees (their representatives) of several employers with identical claims, it may be headed by a united body formed of equal numbers of representatives of these employees.

4. Participation in a strike shall be voluntary. No-one may be compelled to participate or refuse to participate in a strike.

5. Anyone forcing employees to participate in or refuse to participate in a strike shall be held liable in the manner established by the laws of the Republic of Kazakhstan.

Article 299. Announcement of a strike

1. The employer or association of employers (their representatives) shall be given written notice by the authorised body indicated in clause 3, article 298 of this Code of the initiation of a strike and its possible duration at least fifteen days in advance.

2. The decision to call a strike shall indicate:

- 1) the list of disagreements between the parties constituting the grounds for calling the strike;
- 2) the time, date and place of the beginning of the strike, its duration and anticipated number of participants;
- 3) the name of the body heading the strike, the employees' representatives authorised to participate in mediation procedures;
- 4) proposals concerning the minimum amount of necessary work (services) to be performed during the strike period.

Article 300. Powers of the body heading the strike

1. The body heading the strike shall act within the bounds of the rights granted thereto by this Code and on the basis of the powers entrusted thereto by the employees (their representatives).

2. The body heading the strike shall have the right:

- 1) to represent the interests of the employees in interrelations with the employer, association of employers (their representatives), the state, trades unions, other legal entities and officials on resolution of the claims put forward;
- 2) to receive from the employer or association of employers (their representatives) information on matters affecting the interests of employees;
- 3) to have the mass media cover the course of consideration of the employees' claims;
- 4) to engage experts to give their opinions on matters of dispute;

5) to call off a strike with the consent of the employees (their representatives).

3. For a previously suspended strike to be renewed, it is not necessary for the dispute to be reconsidered by the mediation commission, conciliator or labour tribunal. The employer or association of employers (their representatives) and the body for regulation of labour disputes shall be given at least three working days' advance notice of renewal of the strike.

4. The powers of the body heading the strike shall terminate when the parties to the collective labour dispute sign an agreement settling it, as well as in the event of the strike being declared illegal.

5. In exercising its powers, the body heading the strike shall not have the right to pass decision relating to the terms of reference of the employer, state bodies and public associations.

Article 301. Obligations of the parties to the collective labour dispute during a strike

During a strike, the parties to the collective labour dispute are required to continue resolving this dispute by means of mediation procedures.

The employer, state authorities and the body heading the strike are required to take any measures under their control to ensure, during the strike, maintenance of public order, safekeeping of the organisation's assets and protection of employees, as well as of operation of machinery and equipment if a halt thereto would directly jeopardise people's life and health.

Article 302. Guarantees to employees in connection with a strike being called

1. Organisation of or participation in strikes (with the exception of the cases envisaged by clause 1, article 303 of this Code) shall not be deemed to constitute violation of labour discipline by the employee and shall not entail application of the disciplinary measures envisaged by this Code.

2. During a strike, the employee shall retain his job (position), the right to payment of social insurance contributions, and his service record, and shall be guaranteed the other rights deriving from labour relations.

Employees shall not be paid their wages during a strike, apart from cases when the strike is called in connection with non-payment or late payment of wages.

Article 303. Illegal strikes

1. Strikes shall be declared illegal:

1) in periods of martial law or emergencies or special measures in accordance with the legislation on emergencies; in bodies and organisations of the Armed Forces of the Republic of Kazakhstan, other military units and organisations in charge of ensuring the country's defence, protection of the state, emergency response and fire fighting, prevention or elimination of emergencies; in law-enforcement bodies; at hazardous production facilities, at first aid stations and in ambulance services;

2) in railway transport, civil aviation and healthcare organisations, organisations providing for domestic services to the population (public transport, supply of water, electric power, heat and communications), at the continuously operating production units where suspension of activities would have serious and dangerous consequences, in observance of the conditions indicated in clause 2 of this article;

3) in the event of a strike being called on disregard of the time periods, procedures and requirements envisaged by this Code;

4) in cases when this creates a real threat to people's life and health;

5) in other cases envisaged by the laws of the Republic of Kazakhstan.

Given any of the grounds indicated in this clause, the public prosecutor shall have the right to halt the strike before a court passes a corresponding ruling.

2. In railway transport, civil aviation and healthcare organisations, organisations providing for domestic services to the population (public transport, supply of water, electric power, heat and communications), a strike may be called provided the range and volume of the corresponding services required by the population remain available, these being determined on the basis of a prior agreement with the local executive authority.

A strike may be called in a continuously operating production unit only on the condition that continued continuous operation of the main equipment and mechanisms is provided for.

3. A ruling recognising a strike as illegal shall be issued by a court of law in accordance with the laws of the Republic of Kazakhstan.

4. A ruling recognising a strike as illegal shall be issued by a court of law on the basis of an application submitted by the employer or the public prosecutor.

The employees shall be informed of the court ruling through the body heading the strike, which shall immediately notify all the strike participants of the given court ruling.

A court ruling recognising a strike as illegal that has come into legal force shall be subject to immediate execution.

In the event of a direct threat being created to people's life and health, the public prosecutor or a court of law shall have the right to halt the strike before a corresponding ruling is passed.

5. The body heading the strike shall have the right to appeal the court ruling in the manner established by the laws of the Republic of Kazakhstan.

Article 304. Consequences of a strike being declared illegal

If a strike is declared illegal by a court of law, the employer may impose disciplinary liability on the employees participating in the organisation and holding of the strike.

Article 305. Prohibition of lockouts

In the process of the settlement of a collective labour dispute, including during a strike, it is prohibited to enforce a lockout, that is, for employment contracts with employees to be cancelled on the initiative of the employer in connection with their participation in the collective labour dispute or in the strike.

SECTION 5. LABOUR PROTECTION AND LABOUR SAFETY

Chapter 33. STATE MANAGEMENT IN THE SPHERE OF LABOUR PROTECTION AND LABOUR SAFETY

Article 306. The main state policies in the sphere of labour protection and labour safety

State policy in the sphere of labour protection and labour safety is orientated on:

- 1) development and adoption of regulatory and legal acts of the Republic of Kazakhstan in the sphere of labour protection and labour safety;
- 2) development of state, branch (sectoral) and regional programmes in the sphere of labour protection and labour safety;
- 3) creation and implementation of systems of economic incentives to activities involving development and improvement of working conditions, labour protection and labour safety, development and introduction of safe equipment and technologies, production of means of labour safety, personal and collective protection of employees;

- 7) state supervision and control over observance of the legislation of the Republic of Kazakhstan in the sphere of labour protection and labour safety;
- 8) regulatory securing of the procedure for exercising public control over observance of the rights and lawful interests of employees in the sphere of labour protection and labour safety in organisations;
- 9) protection of the lawful interests of employees suffering from industrial accidents and occupational diseases, as well as members of their families;
- 10) establishment of labour compensation for heavy work and work under harmful (particularly harmful) or hazardous working conditions not eliminated by a modern technical level of production and labour organisation;
- 11) dissemination of advanced domestic and foreign experience of work to improve working conditions and labour safety;
- 12) training and further training of experts in labour protection and labour safety;
- 13) organisation of state statistical reporting on industrial injuries and occupational diseases;
- 14) provision for the functioning of a unified system in the sphere of labour protection and labour safety;
- 15) international co-operation in the sphere of labour protection and labour safety.

Article 307. State management, control and supervision in the sphere of labour protection and labour safety

State management, control and supervision in the sphere of labour protection and labour safety shall be exercised by the Government of the Republic of Kazakhstan, by the state labour authority and other competent state authorities in accordance with their terms of reference.

Article 308. Requirements on labour protection and labour safety

1. Requirements on labour protection and labour safety shall be established by regulatory and legal acts of the Republic of Kazakhstan and shall contain rules, procedures and criteria designed to preserve the life and health of employees in the process of their labour activities.
2. Requirements of labour protection and labour safety shall be binding on both employers and employees in performance of their activities on the territory of the Republic of Kazakhstan.

Article 309. Monitoring and assessment of risks in the sphere of labour protection and labour safety

For the purpose of comprehensive assessment of working conditions in the work place, reducing the incidence of industrial injuries and preventing industrial accidents, the state labour authority and its territorial subdivisions shall organise risk monitoring and assessment in the sphere of labour protection and labour safety.

Chapter 34. GUARANTEES OF THE RIGHTS OF EMPLOYEES IN THE SPHERE OF LABOUR PROTECTION AND LABOUR SAFETY

Article 310. Guarantees of the rights to labour protection and labour safety on conclusion of an employment contract

1. The employment contract shall provide an accurate description of the working conditions, including harmful and (or) hazardous production factors, and shall indicate the guarantees, benefits and compensation payments for work under such conditions envisaged by the legislation of the Republic of Kazakhstan and the collective bargaining agreement.
2. Employment contracts with employees engaged in heavy work, work under harmful (particularly harmful) and (or) hazardous working conditions, as well as in work underground, shall be concluded after they have undergone a preliminary medical examination and the absence has been determined of any contraindications with respect to their state of health, in accordance with the requirements established by regulatory and legal acts of the state authority in the sphere of healthcare.

Article 311. Guarantees of the rights of employees to the protection and safety of labour in the process of labour activities

1. Labour protection conditions at the work place shall comply with the requirements of state standards and the labour protection and labour safety rules.

2. During time of work suspension as a consequence of violation by the employer of labour protection and labour safety requirements, the employee's job (position) and average wage shall be retained for him.

3. Refusal by an employee to fulfil work in the event of an immediate threat arising to his life and health or other people shall not entail imposition on him of either disciplinary and (or) material liability.

4. In the event of the employer failing to provide the employee with means of personal and (or) collective protection and special clothing, the employee shall have the right to halt performance of his job duties, while the employer shall pay the average wage of the employee for any idle time caused thereby.

5. In the event of harm being inflicted on the life and health of the employee in performance of his job duties, recompense shall be made for the harm inflicted in the manner and on the conditions envisaged by this Code and by the civil legislation of the Republic of Kazakhstan.

Article 312. Mandatory medical examination of employees

1. The employer shall, at its own expense, arrange for periodical medical examinations and inspections of employees engaged in heavy work or work under harmful (particularly harmful) and (or) hazardous working conditions, in the manner established by the legislation of the Republic of Kazakhstan.

2. Employees engaged in work involving increased danger, operation or machinery and equipment, shall undergo pre-shift medical certification. The list of occupations requiring pre-shift medical certification shall be determined by the state healthcare authority.

Article 313. Training and instruction in and testing of employees on labour protection and labour safety

1. Training and instruction in and testing of employees on labour protection and labour safety shall be performed by the employer at its own expense.

2. The procedure and time schedule for training and instruction in and testing of employees on labour protection and labour safety shall be determined by the state labour authority on agreement with other relevant state authorities in the corresponding spheres of activity.

3. Persons hired to work shall undergo mandatory preliminary training, organised by the employer, with subsequent obligatory testing of their knowledge of labour protection and labour safety. Employees that have not undergone preliminary training and instruction in and testing on labour protection and labour safety shall not be allowed to work.

4. Management and production personnel of organisations responsible for providing for labour protection and labour safety shall periodically, at least once every three years, undergo training in and testing on labour protection and labour safety on further training courses in appropriate educational institutions.

Chapter 35. RIGHTS AND OBLIGATIONS OF EMPLOYEES AND OF THE EMPLOYER IN THE SPHERE OF LABOUR PROTECTION AND LABOUR SAFETY

Article 314. Rights of the employee to labour protection and labour safety

The employee shall have the right to:

- 1) a work place equipped in accordance with the labour protection and labour safety requirements;
- 2) provision with sanitary and amenity premises, means of personal and collective protection, and special clothing in accordance with the labour protection and labour safety requirements, as well as with the employment contract and collective bargaining agreement; organisation or at a facility subject to control by said body), as well as excerpts from submissions by public labour inspectors on eliminating disclosed violations of the rules and regulations of the requirements on labour protection and labour safety;

other documents at the discretion of the commission and relating to consideration of the case.

Article 324. Procedure for investigating industrial accidents

1. Investigation of industrial accidents, with the exception of cases subject to special investigation, shall be carried out by a commission set up by an act of the employer within the twenty-four hours following the event, as follows:

chairman – head of the organisation (production service) or his deputy;

members – head of the labour protection and labour safety service organisation and a representative of the employees.

The official directly responsible for labour protection in the relevant sector where the accident took place shall not be included on the investigation commission.

2. Subject to special investigation shall be the following:

1) accidents with a grave or fatal outcome;

2) group accidents involving two or more employees simultaneously, irrespective of the severity of the victims' injuries;

3) group incidences of acute poisoning.

3. In the event of the employer being an individual, investigation of the industrial accident shall be carried out by the employer or his authorised representative, the representative of the employees, and an expert on labour safety, who may be engaged to take part in the investigation into the accident on a contractual basis.

4. In the event of acute poisoning, the investigation commission shall include representatives of the state authority for sanitary and epidemiological welfare of the population.

5. A representative of the insurance organisation with relevant contractual relations with the employer or the victim shall be entitled to participate in the work of the commission.

6. The period for investigation of the accident shall be no more than ten working days from establishment of the commission.

7. An accident involving people undergoing production practice, students in general education and professional schools or higher educational institutions shall be investigated by a commission consisting of the head of the organisation on the territory of which the accident occurred, with the participation of the employer and a representative of the victim.

8. An accident involving an employee of an organisation located and operating on the territory of another organisation or an employee sent to another organisation to perform a production assignment

(official or contractual duties) shall be investigated directly by the employer with the participation of a responsible representative of the organisation on the territory of which the accident occurred.

9. An accident involving an employee during performance of a combined job shall be investigated and recorded by the employer, on the territory of which or on the instructions of which the work was performed.

10. Accidents occurring as a result of accidents involving means of transport shall be investigated on the basis of the investigation materials of the road traffic police.

The road traffic police shall, within a period of five days of occurrence of the accident, at the request of the chairman of the commission for investigation of accidents, furnish copies of the investigation materials.

11. In each case of investigation of an industrial accident, the commission shall identify and question witnesses of the accident and the persons to blame for violation of the requirements on labour protection and labour safety, and shall obtain the requisite information from the employer and, if possible, an explanation from the victim.

12. Accidents about which the employer is not informed in a timely manner or as a result of which the onset of the disability is not immediate (irrespective of the time period involved) shall be investigated at the request of the victim (or his representative) or on the instructions of the state labour inspector within a period of ten days from the day of registration of the request or receipt of the instruction.

13. On the basis of the collected documents and materials, the commission establishes the circumstances of and reasons for the accident, determines the link between the accident and the production activities of the employer and, correspondingly, whether the victim's presence at the scene of the accident was explained by fulfilment thereby of his job duties, qualifies the accident as an industrial accident or as an accident not connected with production, determines who was responsible for violation of the labour protection and labour safety requirements, and for elimination of the reasons for and prevention of industrial accidents.

14. The working conditions of the accident investigation commission at secure facilities shall be determined in consideration of the specifics governing access to and presence at these facilities.

15. For every accident connected with production and entailing loss of working capacity of an employee (employees), in accordance with a medical opinion (recommendation), an accident report shall be drawn up by the state labour authority in the requisite number of copies (for each victim separately).

For cases of poisoning confirmed in the established manner by a healthcare institution, an accident report shall also be drawn up irrespective of whether they result in loss of working capacity or do not.

Article 325. Specifics of special investigation of industrial accidents

1. Special investigation of an accident shall be carried out by a commission set up by the territorial subdivision of the state labour inspectorate as follows:

chairman – state labour inspector;

members – the employer and representative of the employees.

Acts issued by a state labour inspector constitute legal sanctions imposed for violation by employers and officials of the requirements of the labour legislation established (identified) in the course of an inspection. The acts shall be drawn up in two copies, one of which shall be handed to the employer against its signature.

3. Acts issued by a state labour inspector shall be binding on officials, individuals and legal entities.

4. The format of acts issued by a state labour inspector shall be approved by the state labour authority.

Article 334. Inspections on observance of the labour legislation of the Republic of Kazakhstan, their types, forms and timeframes

1. Inspections shall be subdivided into planned and unscheduled checks.

A planned inspection is planned by the state labour authority or its territorial subdivision in consideration of the time intervals established by the laws of the Republic of Kazakhstan in relation to previous checks.

A planned inspection may also be performed in conjunction with other controlling authorities and employees' representatives on aspects of observance of the labour legislation of the Republic of Kazakhstan.

2. In relation to a single individual or legal entity, a planned inspection may be carried out no more often than once a year, and of small business – no more often than once every three years, unless the laws of the Republic of Kazakhstan envisage otherwise.

3. Unscheduled inspections are performed in response to applications from individuals or legal entities or state authorities concerning violation of the labour legislation of the Republic of Kazakhstan, as well as in the event that the state labour inspector established facts constituting a threat to the life and health of employees and requiring immediate elimination of violations in the sphere of labour protection and labour safety, or if other information is received that is confirmed by documents and other evidence and testifying to signs of such violations or disclosed during investigations into industrial accidents.

Anonymous applications shall not constitute grounds for an unscheduled inspection.

4. The duration of an inspection shall not exceed ten calendar days. In exceptional cases, if special research, tests or expert examinations are required, as well as in the event of a substantial volume of the inspection to be performed by the state labour inspectorate or its territorial subdivision (or person acting on its behalf), the duration of an inspection may be extended to twenty calendar days for a legal entity lacking any separate structural subdivisions and thirty calendar days for a legal entity with a separate structural subdivision.

Article 335. Procedure for appealing against decision, actions (inaction) on the part of the state labour inspector in exercise of state control

1. In the event of violation of the rights and lawful interests of the employer during exercise of state control, the employer shall have the right to appeal against the actions (inaction) of the state labour inspector to the state labour authority, the superior state labour inspector and (or) a court of law in the manner established by the legislation of the Republic of Kazakhstan.

2. An appeal shall not entail suspension of execution of acts issued by the state labour inspector.

Article 336. Interaction between the state labour inspectorate and other state authorities and organisations

1. The state labour inspectorate shall carry out its activities in interaction with other state supervisory and control authorities, with employees' representatives, public associations, and other organisations.

2. State authorities shall render assistance to the state labour inspectorate in fulfilment of its tasks of exercising control over fulfilment of the labour legislation of the Republic of Kazakhstan.

Article 337. Responsibility of the state labour inspector in exercising state control

The state labour inspector shall, in the event of failure to fulfil or duly fulfil his official duties in the exercise of state control, as well as in the event of other unlawful actions (inaction) being committed, bear the liability established by the laws of the Republic of Kazakhstan.

Chapter 39. INTERNAL CONTROL OVER LABOUR PROTECTION AND LABOUR SAFETY

Article 338. Internal control over labour protection and labour safety

1. Internal control shall include organisation of monitoring of the state of working conditions, performance of current analysis of data on production control, risk assessment and taking of measures to eliminate any discrepancies disclosed with the labour protection and labour safety requirements.
2. Internal control over labour protection and labour safety shall be carried out by the employer for the purpose of observing the set labour protection and labour safety requirements at work places and taking immediate measures to remedy any violation identified.

Article 339. Mechanism for exercise of internal control over labour protection and labour safety

1. For the purpose of exercising internal control over observance of the labour protection and labour safety requirements in production organisations with a staff of over 50, the employer shall set up a labour protection and labour safety service. In terms of its status, the labour protection and labour safety service is equated to the key production services.
2. Standard regulations on the labour protection and labour safety service in an organisation are approved by the state labour authority.
3. An employer with fewer than 50 employees shall introduce a position of labour protection and labour safety expert in consideration of the specifics of its activities or entrust the labour protection and labour safety obligations to another specialist.
4. Instructions of the labour protection and labour safety service or the labour protection and labour safety expert on fulfilment of labour protection and labour safety requirements shall be binding on all employees of the organisation.

Chapter 40. PUBLIC CONTROL OVER OBSERVANCE OF THE LABOUR LEGISLATION OF THE REPUBLIC OF KAZAKHSTAN

Article 340. Public control over the observance of the labour legislation within the organisation

1. Public control in the sphere of labour protection and labour safety in the organisation shall be performed by a public labour safety inspector elected by the trades union committee of the organisation and, in the absence of a trades union, by the general meeting (conference) of employees.

2. Republican, branch and regional associations of employees shall exercise public control over observance of the labour legislation in organisations on the condition that such rights are secured in agreements and collective bargaining agreements.

Article 341. Rights of public labour safety inspectors

The public labour safety inspector shall have the right:

- 1) to protect the rights of employees to labour safety before the employer by means of public control over observance by employers of the regulatory and legal acts on labour protection and labour safety, agreements, collective bargaining agreements on creation by the employer of normal working conditions and safety equipment at work places in organisations;
